

6 BIODYNAMIC WINES TO TRY

BY ANDREA ROBINSON

MANY OF MY respected winemaking friends say that, while the benefits to the land of biodynamic agriculture are a major positive, they are equally motivated by its impact on the wines' quality. Having tasted these wines over many years, I agree that converting to biodynamic methods has been better for the environment and produces better-than-ever wines.

Bonny Doon Ca' del Solo Sangiovese, San Benito County 2005, $14 A fantastically food-worthy wine. Sangiovese, the grape in Chianti, is known for its mouth-watering strawberry fruit, zingy acidity and sandalwood spiciness. This one's got all those qualities in spades.

Master Sommelier Andrea Robinson has a new online video wine course at andreawine.com.

